Foster Care
Angels

There are almost 20,000 children living in care across New South Wales. That's thousands of children living in crisis, often lacking self worth or struggling to make sense of the world.

At Foster Care Angels it is our mission to support and empower children and their carers so that no child will suffer from discrimination or disadvantage with the foster care system.

As a not-for-profit run organisation we rely on the generous support of our business partners and the greater community. This is necessary so that we are able to maintain the provision of our unique services to children in foster care and their carers.

About Foster Care Angels

Foster Care Angels exists to take trauma out of the foster care system.

The organisation provides ongoing support for children and their carers in the foster care system so that no child needs to suffer trauma, discrimination and disadvantage. The trauma that is experienced by many of these children is to most of us beyond belief and they bear the traumatic results throughout their entire life. Without support they become angry, depressed and dysfunctional adults turning to drugs and alcohol that lead them down the inevitable pathway to the criminal justice system and its vicious circle. Foster Care Angels Board, staff and volunteers work to provide an opportunity to change this negative trajectory.

Founded by carers who understand that without carers to take on the burden of supporting these traumatised children there can be no system, support is provided in several ways. The core service is the provision of care packages that are age and gender specific and are made available to all children entering foster care. A Bed In A Bag provides new bedding for young people living in group homes and are further supported by a mental and emotional health education and support program. Carers are supported with educational conferences, training and networking opportunities and affordable holiday accommodation.

When foster care children reach 18, they are deemed to be adults and are moved into community housing. Research has identified this cohort of young people as being the most vulnerable in the community. Transition into adulthood is faced without adequate life skills or family support that ensures a pathway into isolation, depression and significant representation in the criminal justice system. Existing services such as Headspace, Beyond Blue, etc., orientate mental health programs requiring the person at risk to have the ability to identify themselves as having an issue. The FCA project provides an education program to potentially mitigate the problems before they happen. This program aims to counter balance some of the disadvantage of being a foster child. It provides education and development of skills that enable a mentally healthy transition into adult life through understanding how to manage anxieties that can lead to depression, feelings of isolation and other mental health issues and provide support for those that find themselves in difficulty.

Foster Care Angels' core goals is to take away the trauma as much as possible and as early as possible for children in out of home care. With the help of supporting carers and the community, we can turn around the trajectory for children in care and in so doing, make Australia a better place.
